Bylaws, Subpart B, Article VI, Section 3a) 2) above.

Section 2 – Composition

Ways to Carry the Message

Below are some ways that intergroups and service boards can carry the message.

- Establish a telephone answering system to receive inquiries from newcomers.
- Maintain phone book listings in as wide an area as possible to attract the still suffering compulsive overeater.
- Respond to mail inquiries and route them to local groups.

- Publish regular newsletters or bulletins to keep groups informed about each other and about upcoming OA events.
- Distribute up to date directories of all nearby meetings.
- Ensure that the World Service Office has current information regarding your intergroup/service board and each group that you represent. This includes any new groups, cancellations, revisions to meeting information, and telephone numbers/email addresses of contact people. (Please indicate the WSO group number(s) on the registration/change form.)
- Assist newly formed groups in the area.
- Maintain a stock of OA-approved literature for sale.
- Sponsor and arrange workshops, marathons, and other special events for the member groups.
- Establish a Twelfth Step Within Committee to contact compulsive overeaters who need a Twelfth-Step call.
- Develop a committee to handle requests from local news media, arrange for radio or TV public service announcements or programs about OA, and furnish speakers for outside organizations.
- Arrange with local newspapers to have announcements of meetings in free “Community Calendars.”
- Cooperate with agencies who deal with the community so they know where to direct compulsive overeaters who still suffer.
- Send representatives to regional assemblies and delegates to the World Service Business Conference.
- When the need arises and the local groups can provide support, a small office may be rented to handle intergroup/service board business.

It only takes two or more groups to form an intergroup or service board. Intergroups and service boards are not expensive—only a name, a post office box (if possible), and a summary of purpose and operating procedures are required. Most important, keep it simple.

It is important to keep accurate financial records from the very beginning of the intergroup/service board’s existence. Should the intergroup/service board seek tax-exempt status from the US Internal Revenue Service, complete financial records from the beginning will be required. For those outside of the US, check with your local tax office.

The above ideas are not meant to be done at once; they are only suggestions. Let the group conscience be your guide to your area’s top priority. The suggestions will help to keep the lines of communication open between the suffering compulsive overeater and OA as a whole. The best source of reaching out is the availability of “someone” 24 hours per day. Many intergroups and service boards make this their goal.
